Dublin Caſtle, October 22.

THIS Day the Parliament having met according to Appointment, his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant went in State to the Houſe of Peers; and being ſeated on the Throne, with the uſual Ceremony, his Excellency ſent for the Commons, and directed them to chuſe a Speaker: And they having unanimouſly elected the Right Honourable John Ponſonby, Eſq; into that Office, he was by them preſented, and was approved by his Excellency. And then his Excellency made the following Speech to both Houſes.

His Excellency George Dunk, Earl of Halifax, Lord Lieutenant General and General Governor of Ireland, his Speech to both Houſes of Parliament at Dublin, on Thurſday the 22d Day of October, 1761.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I have the Honour of His Majeſty's Commands to meet this His firſt Parliament in Ireland: I obey them with entire Satisfaction, from an Aſſurance, that your Deliberations will be influenced by the ſame Principles of Loyalty and Affection to your Sovereign, and of Zeal for the Proſperity of your Country, which have ſo long diſtinguiſhed the Parliaments of this Kingdom.

The Loſs of our late moſt Gracious Sovereign, at a Time when not only the Security of His own Dominions, but the Welfare of Europe, ſeemed ſo eſſentially to depend on the Continuance of His Life, muſt have affected you in the moſt ſenſible Manner.

Your Grief however has already been alleviated, and your Loſs repaired by the Succeſſion of His Majeſty, not only to the Throne, (His legal Inheritance,) but to the Duty, Affection and Confidence of His Subjects, as unbounded as the greateſt of His Predeceſſors have ever poſſeſſed in the moſt fortunate Periods of their Reign.

This Parliament happily commences with the Acceſſion of a King, bred under the Influence and formed by the Example, of a Prince, who uniformly tempered Prerogative with Law; and whoſe Glory it was, in the Exerciſe of His Power, to protect the Rights and Liberties of His People.

You can be no Strangers to His Majeſty's moſt gracious Declaration, that the Preſervation of the Conſtitution in Church and State, and the inforcing a due Obedience to the Laws, (not more neceſſary to His own Authority than to the Liberties of His People,) ſhall be the firſt and conſtant Object of His Care. And I have it particularly in Command to declare to you, that His Subjects of this Kingdom are fully and in every Reſpect comprehended in theſe Aſſurances.

His Majeſty's wiſe Choice of a Royal Conſort, eminent for Her perſonal Virtues and Endowments, and deſcended from an Houſe ſo illuſtrious for its Attachment to the Proteſtant Cauſe, diſplays in the cleareſt Light His paternal Care, not only to preſerve to us, but tranſmit unimpaired to our Poſterity, the Bleſſings of His Reign, Liberty and pure Religion.

When I conſider the Security of our preſent, and the Proſpect of our future Happineſs; and when I ſee you animated, as I am perſwaded you are, with every Sentiment which Loyalty and Gratitude can inſpire; I aſſure myſelf of a Seſſion of Parliament, that will be diſtinguiſhed by its uninterrupted Harmony, and by its effective Zeal for the Support of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown. Such Diſpoſitions, ſteadily adhered to, cannot fail, under His Majeſty's paternal Influence, to preſerve you an happy, and to eſtabliſh you an opulent and a flouriſhing People.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I have ordered the proper Officers to lay before you the ſeveral Accounts and Eſtimates; from which you will be enabled to judge of the Proviſions neceſſary to be made for the Support of His Majeſty's Government, and for your own Security. The Means of making thoſe Proviſions, (which I hope will be expeditiouſly adjuſted,) I doubt not will, on your Part, be ſuch as ſhall be moſt ſuitable to the Circumſtances of this Country; On mine, you may depend upon the utmoſt Frugality.

You will take into your Conſideration the ſeveral incidental Charges of the Military Eſtabliſhment, as it now ſtands, of which exact Eſtimates cannot be formed; and alſo that a large Sum will be wanted for the effectual Repair of the Barracks; a Work, which cannot be delayed.

I muſt obſerve to you, that, notwithſtanding the Authority given by the Vote of Credit of the laſt Parliament, the Sum of two hundred thouſand Pounds only has been raiſed; a Circumſtance of Oeconomy, which cannot fail to give you Satisfaction.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The Improvement of your natural Advantages ought to be the Object of your moſt ſerious Attention. Agriculture, the ſureſt Support of every State, deſerves at all Times your higheſt Regard, to the End that, through your Wiſdom, the Skill and Induſtry of the Inhabitants of this Country may fully correſpond with the Bounty of Providence in their Favour.

To encourage, regulate and improve, which will of Courſe extend, your Manufactures and your Commerce, will, I am ſure, be your continual Care. Your Linen Trade has long and juſtly been the Object of public Encouragement; but much ſtill remains to carry to its full Extent a Manufacture, for which there is ſo large a Demand; which is ſo various in its Branches; and which, with due Attention, might be rendered as conſiderable a Source of Wealth to the whole, as it is now to Part of this Kingdom.

There is no Object more worthy our Attention than our Proteſtant Charter Schools. Notwithſtanding the peaceable Demeanour of the Papiſts in this Kingdom, it muſt always be your Duty and your Intereſt to divert from Error, by every effectual, though gentle, Method, the deluded Followers of a blind Religion. And theſe Inſtitutions merit your Support and Protection, not only as Schools of Religion, but as Seminaries of uſeful Arts and virtuous Induſtry.

Let me now in the moſt earneſt Manner recommend to you, that, after ſo many honourable Events abroad, and ſo many joyful Events at Home, neither Jealouſies, nor Diſtruſts, neither publick Heats, nor private Animoſities, may diſturb that Tranquillity, which is deſirable at all Times, and at this Seaſon is peculiarly neceſſary to your Welfare.

As to what regards myſelf, you ſhall always find me not only ready, but ſollicitous, to contribute whatever my Authority, my Credit, or my Experience can furniſh for theſe ſalutary Purpoſes. And I can with Truth aſſure you, that I ſhall in no Degree fulfil the Intentions, nor merit the Approbation of my Royal Maſter, but by ſtudying the Peace and Welfare of the Kingdom which His Majeſty has committed to my Care.

I am

[Price Six-pence.]

I am ſenſible the Situation, in which I am placed, is as arduous, as it is important: But I bring with me the cleareſt Intentions for your Service. To maintain the Honour, and to promote the Service of the Crown, are Duties, from which I never will depart: To forward the Proſperity, and to preſerve the Conſtitution of this Country, are Objects, of which I never will loſe Sight. And there is nothing I more ſincerely wiſh, than that the Intereſts of both Kingdoms may be as thoroughly underſtood, as they are inſeparably connected. There is no Point I ſhall more diligently Labour: And I muſt now aſſure you at the Opening of my Adminiſtration, (what the Progreſs of it will I hope demonſtrate,) that I have no End or Ambition, but to be able to repreſent in the warmeſt Manner to His Majeſty the Zeal and Unanimity of His Subjects in this Kingdom, and to carry with me, on my Return into the Royal Preſence, the good Opinion, the Affection, the Hearts of the People of Ireland.

St. James's, October 31.

The uninterrupted Courſe of Succeſs to your Majeſty's Arms, with which it hath pleaſed the Almighty to reward your Piety, Wiſdom, and Magnanimity; the Vigour and Steadineſs of your Councils; the Ardour and Intrepidity of your Forces by Sea and Land; and the Increaſe and Improvement of Manufactures and Commerce beyond the Example of former Times, (even the moſt peaceful) under your Majeſty's Auſpicious Patronage and Protection, were juſt Preſages of laſting Glory to your Majeſty, and Proſperity to your Kingdoms.

But from the Choice which you have made of a Partner on your Throne, we now entertain the moſt ſanguine Hopes, that your Majeſty will perpetuate the Felicity of your faithful Subjects to their Poſterity. And we fervently implore the Divine Providence, to grant to your Majeſty and your Royal Conſort a long and glorious Reign over a happy and grateful People; and that your Virtues, with your Crown, may deſcend to your Progeny to the lateſt Generations.

We alſo beg Leave, on this Opportunity, to return your Majeſty our moſt ſincere and humble Thanks for your paternal Attention to the Intereſt of this Kingdom, in ſending a Chief Governor to preſide over us, who, by his Abilities, Aſſiduity, and publick Spirit, in every important Office in his native Country, hath juſtly acquired the general Applauſe of all Ranks of Men.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

We look into Futurity, and ſee the Throne of Great Britain filled with the Deſcendants of your Majeſty and your Royal Conſort, to the lateſt Ages; bleſſing their People by your great Example, making their Happineſs the firſt Object of their Care; eſtabliſhing, by your great Example, this wiſeſt of all Social Maxims, that the true Happineſs of a People muſt be founded on Virtue and true Religion.
